Of the above bills, those for scraping and raking the roads, viz., $197.99, have not been paid by the Treasurer. The income from the Ames Fund, for the repairs of roads, has been but $1,153.50. If the stocks and bonds which constitute this fund had all paid the full interest promised, we should have received $3,697 for this year. The question of great interest to the town is, when will this back interest be paid, and how much money is the town willing to advance for the repair of roads, with the expectation that the more than $5,000 of back interest will be paid? For certainly, if it is paid, it can be used to pay what has been spent in excess of the amount received for last year and this. As far as we can learn from those best acquainted with the market value of the securities which constitute this fund, the back and also future interest will be paid in full.

Concerning the amount and quality of the work done by this department this year, we think it will compare very favorably with any past year.

REPORT OF THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

TO THE CITIZENS OF EASTON :

We submit the following report for the year 1895. We call especial attention to the detailed report of the superintendent.

STATISTICS.

Number of children in town, May 1, 1895, between the ages of five and fifteen . . .	830
Number of different scholars of all ages enrolled on the school registers in 1895 . .	1,035
Number over fifteen years of age . . .	82
Number under five years of age . . .	33

APPROPRIATIONS.

The School Committee requests that the following sums be appropriated for the support of schools in 1896: For salaries, $13,000; fuel, $1,200; care of school-houses, $1,300; supplies and sundries, $1,000.

We ask for the usual amounts, viz. : for repairs, $1,000; for text-books, $800; for furniture, $200; for transportation, $1,600.

These appropriations are substantially the same as those of last year, the total increase, over last year's, being $800, which amount will be necessary for the expense of additional janitorship and fuel for the new High School building. It may be well to note, here, that the cost of schools in Easton is not high as compared with the cost of schools in other towns of like population and value. This will be seen by referring to the schedule on page 11 of the School Committee's report of last year. In the last published Report of the State Board of Education there is a graduated table in which all the towns of the State are numerically arranged according to the percentage of taxable property appropriated for the support of public schools. In this table of 352 towns, Easton stands No. 287.

Your Committee has been investigating the subject of maintaining an evening school and has made careful inquiry. We find that quite a large number of persons in North Easton, whose average age is about eighteen years, would attend such a school. Perhaps it is unnecessary to state that, as a School Committee, we have no power to establish an evening school, inasmuch as the provisions of the Statutes directing towns to maintain evening schools do not apply to towns having so small a population as Easton. We have, however, been investigating the subject with a view to the desirability of having part of the income of the Oakes Ames Fund devoted to the support of such a school. Whether the Trustees of that fund will see fit to expend any part of the income for that purpose has not been determined at the date of this report. We have made this investigation as we have made like investigations into the advisability of establishing other special courses which are paid for from the income of the Oakes Ames Fund.

In the death of the late Ex-Governor Ames, the town lost a citizen whose interest and generosity in the management of our schools have been felt and appreciated for many years.

The free distribution of magazines, to families in the several districts outside of No. 7, which was one of his acts of generosity, has been kindly continued by his two sons, William H. and Oakes Ames.

The new school building in Unionville has been completed and its utility and beauty need no mention here.

The new High School building is nearly completed and will soon be ready for occupancy. Easton may then congratulate herself upon being one of the best equipped towns, in educational facilities, in the State.

EASTON, Feb. 10, 1896.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

TO THE SCHOOL COMMITTEE OF EASTON :

Gentlemen, — The Superintendent of the Public Schools would submit his report for the year 1895. It is his fifth report, and the tenth in the series of annual reports by the Superintendent of the Public Schools of this town.

THE CORPS OF TEACHERS.

In thirteen of our twenty-one schools there have been no changes during the year in the teaching force. The following is the record of appointments and resignations : —

APPOINTMENTS.

CHESTER L. HAYWARD, Principal, A and B Grammar, No. 7.
MARY A. SIMMONS, Principal, Union Primary School.
GERTRUDE A. CANEGALY, Assistant, C, D, E, Grammar, No. 7.
MABEL M. LEACH, Assistant, Ungraded School, No. 9.
CLARA A. DRAKE, transferred from No. 7 to Grammar School, No. 8.

RESIGNATIONS.

LOUISA C. YOUNG, Principal, A and B Grammar School, No. 7.
ALICE M. HOWARD, Principal, Unionville School.
LIZZIE S. CAVANAUGH, Principal, Union Primary School.
ABBIE A. SEYSER, Assistant, Ungraded School, No. 2.

Misses Cavanaugh and Seyser were graduated at the Quincy Training School. Miss Howard was graduated at the State Normal School in Bridgewater. These ladies were successful teachers whose resignations were regret fully accepted. Miss Cavanaugh resigned on account of ill health; and Misses Howard and Seyser are now receiving higher salaries in other towns. Miss Young, who was for several years the accomplished teacher of the higher classes in the Grammar School of North Easton, brought to her work culture and experience. With tact to guide and firmness to control, she had that art of all arts, — the art to keep herself one of and yet the one above the school. By her resignation the town lost the services of one of its most efficient and conscientious teachers.

ATTENDANCE.

The epidemic of scarlet fever during the whole of the winter and for the larger part of the spring term, very much lowered the average membership and attendance. The following table gives the summary of perfect attendance for the past five years : —

	1891.	1892.	1893.	1894.	1895.
Number of pupils punctual and present every half day for three terms	3	14	17	28	11
Number of pupils punctual and present every half day for two terms	22	59	66	62	53
Number of pupils punctual and present every half day for one term	95	155	177	145	137
Totals	120	228	260	235	201

There have been fewer cases of truancy than in former years. The truant officer, in North Easton, Mr. Samuel M. Rennie, deserves a word of commendation for arduous and exacting duties faithfully performed.

SCHOOL PROPERTY.

The appropriation for repairs was overdrawn owing to the painting of the school-house in No. 7. The building had been too long neglected. It was deemed advisable, therefore, to paint it, although the cost was not included in estimates for the year. Extensive repairs were made at Easton Furnace; and the school-house at No. 9 was painted. This year it will be necessary to paint the school-houses in South Easton, Bay Street, and Poquanticut. It is desirable that a cellar be placed under the Bay Street School, as the floor is cold when all other parts of the room are sufficiently warm.

THE HIGH SCHOOL.

This institution is a credit and an honor to the town. Each succeeding year is better than the last. The superintendent recommends that the English Course be strengthened. This can be accomplished without incurring any additional expense. By a division of two of the larger classes into sections, which, in effect, diminished the teaching force, it became necessary to omit entirely the second year's work in French. But this is not likely to occur next year as the entering class will be smaller. In September a special instructor was appointed for Bookkeeping and Penmanship. The work in these subjects has been characterized by great earnestness on the part of teacher and pupils.

THE TRAINING SCHOOL.

A teacher is required to have first, high moral character; next, scholarship, and last, professional training. It is the aim of the Training School to supply the third requisite. Our training school has done an admirable service from which the town is reaping a substantial benefit; but it does not give complete preparation for the work of a teacher. To give a thorough professional outfit the standard of admission must be raised.

The Secretary of the State Board of Education, in his Report of last year, alluding to the short-circuiting now going on in our training schools said: —

“ If high standards are not required for admission to these training schools, if they serve as short cuts to teacher’s positions, — cuts that dispense largely with that kind of training which the normal schools are especially fitted to give, — then the towns which support these training schools and the State are working at cross-purposes, and not in the mutually helpful spirit that best advances the interests of our schools. It cannot be too strenuously urged that we want teachers for the schools and not schools for the teachers; that the interests of the children are the transcendent ones, and not the interests of those who want to teach them; that, therefore, the whole subject of providing teachers should be viewed primarily from the needs of the school, and not from the needs, however pressing, of candidates for positions in them. All this leads up to the conclusion that the Normal School Diploma, or some satisfactory equivalent, should be insisted upon as a prerequisite for admission to a local training school. This policy would raise the tone of every training school in the State, and therefore, in time, of the teaching in the community that supports it. The idea of the training school is admirable; the State is committed, and wisely, to the policy of having model and practice schools in connection with each of its normal schools. The additional practice to be obtained in a local training school should be viewed as an additional provision for insuring the selection of good teachers.”

In the light of these suggestions, and in order that the town may not work against the declared policy of the State, the Superintendent earnestly recommends that, on and after Sept. 1, 1897, the High School Diploma of the longer course, and a year of attendance at one of the State Normal Schools, or satisfactory equivalents, shall be the prerequisites for admission to the Training School. The following named have received diplomas or certificates of graduation : —

CONCLUSION.

The Superintendent cannot close this brief report without bearing testimony to the high character of our Public Schools. They deserve the unstinted confidence and liberal support of our citizens. If, in any of the schools, children are falling behind at all in the essential studies, it is because so many other things have been crowded into the curriculum. It sounds old-fashioned to press the claims of the "three R's"; but the necessity is as great to-day as it ever was, to give a thorough training in those fundamental branches which, by common consent, are regarded as the elements of sound learning. In the arrangement of the school programs, therefore, teachers-must put these subjects in the foreground, and give to them the larger share of time, of thought, of strength.

Your attention is invited to the Appendix which contains special reports, financial statements, and tabulated statistics.

Respectfully submitted,

EDWARD B. MAGLATHLIN,

Superintendent of Schools.

APPENDIX.

APPENDIX.

[Extract from the Report of the State Board of Education, 1894-95.]

Whatever educational means and machinery State and local enactments may provide, the supreme purpose of them all is the welfare of the children,—their high serviceableness to themselves, to the State, and to those who come after them. They are citizens in training; the potency of the coming State is in them. The enlightened interest of the citizen in his own prosperity, the enlightened interest of the State in its own integrity,—these admit no antagonism between them. The welfare of the one is bound up in the welfare of the other. Measures that help the one help the other also, and among these measures it is the verdict of history that those relating to public education, whatever their shortcomings are of highest efficiency. Dangerous as is the intelligence of bad men, the danger that confronts the State from such intelligence is as nothing beside that which confronts it from ignorance. But, whatever the dangers from either source, the only defence against them must be sought in the intelligence of good men.

If more than $10,000,000 was expended on the public schools last year, it by no means follows that the State has been unduly taxed or even that it has taxed itself enough. If without burden to itself it expends more per pupil than its sister States or than it expended itself ten years ago, it is something to take pride in, provided better school conditions can be shown as a result. To assign our relatively high level of expenditure for the public schools as a reason for descending to a lower level would not be creditable to us. Large as this sum of $10,000,000 is, it averages — salaries, buildings, equipment, and all — only $4 per capita for the population of the State. The pettiest luxuries of the people average more. It is an expenditure that pays for itself many times over. Sentimental dividends are not meant just now, but only those of plain hard cash or its equivalent. Hon. William T.

Harris, United States Commissioner of Education, makes the following impressive statement:—

I find, by returns made to the National Bureau of Education, that the total amount of school education that each inhabitant of Massachusetts is receiving on an average—basing the calculation on the attendance in public and private schools and the length of the annual school term—is nearly seven years of two hundred days each, while the average given each citizen in the whole nation is only four and three tenths of such years. No other State is giving so much education to its people as Massachusetts, and yet all the education given in all its institutions does not amount on an average to so much as seven eighths of an elementary education of eight years. Even Massachusetts is not overeducating the people. But there would seem to be some connection between the fact that, while her citizens get nearly twice the national average amount of education, her wealth-producing power as compared with other States stands almost in the same ratio, namely at seventy-three cents per day for each man, woman, and child, while the average for the whole nation was only forty cents.

Consider for a moment what is implied in this ratio of seventy-three to forty. It means for every man, woman, and child in the State an average wealth-producing power of thirty-three cents a day in excess of the average of the nation at large, or more than $100 a year. It means that the 2,500,000 people in Massachusetts produce $250,000,000 a year more than they would produce if they were only average earners. This is twenty-five times the annual expenditure for schools.

PARTING SONG.

To-day we part with scenes most dear,	The journey 'long life's crooked way,
And say "farewell" to all,	Is weary at the best,
But memories will linger near	But after all the toll, some day
When words cannot recall;	We'll find a vale of rest;
The smiling faces that we've met	If in the future we should meet
And cherished day by day,	Upon the other shore,
We shall not very soon forget,	'T will be a joy, once more to greet
Though we are far away.	The loving friends of yore.

CHORUS.

To-day we part with scenes most dear,
And say "farewell" to all,
But memories will linger near
When words cannot recall.

SUMMARIZED REPORTS OF SPECIAL INSTRUCTION UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE OAKES AMES BEQUEST.

THE SEWING SCHOOL.

One hundred and eighty-eight girls have received instruction; and the results of the year are more satisfactory than for any previous year since the school opened.

This is due to the new and thoroughly equipped room which has been provided by the trustees of the fund. The following is a list of articles made in 1895:—

Two curtains, 282 pillow cases, 2 sheets, 1 ruffled pillow case, 4 bolster cases, 8 roller towels, 411 towels, 5 flannel skirts, 5 cotton skirts, 8 dress skirts, 1 dress, 8 pairs of sleeves, 10 Mother-Hubbard night-dresses, 3 sack night-dresses, 1 night shirt, 2 underwaists, 19 pairs drawers, 258 small aprons, 31 large aprons, 1 waist apron, 1 large embroidered apron, 13 large hemstitched aprons, 11 napkins, 31 handkerchiefs, 415½ yards of hemming, 8½ yds. of overseaming, 29 yards stitching.

These articles are taken into the homes of those who make them.

THE SCHOOL KITCHEN.

During the fifth year of the Cooking School, ninety pupils have received instruction and practice.

The plan of work has been much the same as in former years. The beginners are given the simplest forms of cookery and go on gradually to the more complex.

Special attention is paid to the general care and neatness of the kitchen.

Particular stress is laid on the best ways of using up the cheaper and tougher parts of meat in the most nourishing and palatable manner, as in stews, soup stock, and rolled beefsteak. That not a scrap of anything need be wasted is shown by the various warmed-over dishes of meat and vegetables. The making and baking of bread is taught; also various methods of using up stale bread.

The children are interested as is shown by the attendance which is excellent.

The report of work done at home has been satisfactory, and there is no reason why the pupils, with the knowledge of cookery and housework gained in the school kitchen, should not be able to carry into their homes ideas of economy, and a usefulness which many persons, deprived of this branch, often gain only by years of hard experience.

SLOYD.

The new manual-training room at the Ames School building was opened Sept. 18, 1895. The system taught is that known as the "Swedish Sloyd," which had its origin in Sweden, but has been adapted to the needs of American children.

There is no equivalent in English for the word "sloyd"; it is derived from a word originally meaning ability to design and execute, dexterity of hand, and now signifies educational manual-training.

It is not confined to work in wood, though this material is commonly used in this country and in England.

The object of sloyd is not technical skill, but aims for the "harmonious development of the pupil during the formative age, giving by manual exercises and the use of the creative instinct such general training as will tend to fit him, mentally, morally, and physically, for any subsequent special training."

In pursuance of its aim sloyd insists upon the necessity for —

1. Properly located, well-ventilated, and well-lighted work rooms, with sufficient space for freedom of movement for each pupil.
2. Benches that are so constructed as to be easily adjusted at any lesson.
3. The maintenance of a gymnastically-correct position in the performance of all kinds of work.
4. The exclusion of all kinds of tools and forms of work tending to retard growth, and to injure or malform the body.
5. Giving prominence to the use of such tools as require the exercise of both sides of the body equally, and to those which require strong muscular effort.

The sloyd course for grammar grades comprises seventy-two separate exercises, including the making of fifteen different joints, and the use of forty-seven different tools. There are thirty-one models in the course.

The pupil requires three years in which to complete the course, working two hours each week. There are thirteen models in the work of the first year.

Sloyd is based upon the same principles as the kindergarten.

The exercises are strictly progressive and so arranged as to secure the constant and proportionate development of mind and body. Though each model is complete in itself, it prepares the way for the one following.

Sloyd lays great stress upon the useful model as well as the finished one. One which can be put to practical use in the home or serve in play, arouses greater interest in the child, and thus incites him to better work. "Real discipline comes to the mind when it acts, not languidly, but with full energy; and it acts with energy only when it is interested in what it does."

It is not to be inferred, however, that because of the useful model, the advocates of sloyd lose sight of intellectual training; nor that boys are to be carpenters or cabinet-makers, because they are learning to work in wood. Not so. Underlying all work of the professional man and the mechanic, of the artist and the artisan, are certain qualities, such as accuracy, discrimination, and concentration, and sloyd aims to fix these qualities.

Sloyd strives to lay a broad foundation for future work, not simply to teach a trade or dexterity in one line.

The working-drawing as used in manual training is of great value.

The drawing is made by the pupil or he is given one to read. He learns to understand the use and the meaning of it and to find the relation between it and the object to be made.

In manual training, the pupil gains also positive knowledge of measurements and their practical use, as well as a clearer understanding of fractions, that branch of arithmetic which often proves so troublesome.

Besides demanding exact work, sloyd gives an opportunity for free-hand work, more especially by the use of the knife, which is the first tool used. It is the simplest and the least mechanical tool, and the only one with which alone a finished article can be made.

It is of great value inasmuch as its use necessitates the whole attention of the pupil.

Sloyd strives among other principles to —

1. Instill a taste for labor in general, as well as a love of it.
2. To inspire respect for rough, honest, bodily labor.
3. To develop independence and self-reliance.
4. To train in habits of order, exactness, and neatness.
5. To train the eye and sense of form, to give general dexterity of hand, and to develop touch.

6. To accustom to attention, industry, perseverance, and patience.

And in every way to supplement other studies, and co-operate with them, that the pupil may acquire greater brain-power, and be better able to choose an occupation.

The pupils who began the sloyd work in September were from the seventh, eighth, and ninth grades, and from the entering class in the High School. Dec. 20, 1895, there was a total enrolment of seventy pupils. In the three higher grades, the pupils began at the same point and at the close of the term were upon their sixth model. The seventh grade pupils are working in the preliminary sloyd; this course comprises fifteen models and is completed in one year.

It would be of advantage if the work could begin in the sixth grade, as there is a whittling course of eighteen models, arranged for that grade, the work to be done in two dimensions only and with simple tools.

The added expense would be slight as the most of the tools are already a part of the sloyd outfit.

If the plan now in use is followed, the present seventh grade pupils at the end of four years will be ready for the high school course, which is under consideration.

Before such a course can be taken, however, it will be necessary for the pupils to have a knowledge of the following:—

1. The making and using of both scale and detail drawing.
2. The use of both oil-stone and grind-stone, sharpening and care of planes, chisels, gouges, and carving tools, filling of gauge-spur and bits.
3. Proper angle and shape of saw-teeth and different kinds of saws.
4. Methods of planing, boring, scoring, and finishing.

5. Ways of fastening: as nailing, screwing, dowelling, dovetailing, etc.

6. A knowledge of the different joints in use in mechanical work.

The pupils should have an opportunity to study tree sections, to learn of the growth and the structure of different kinds of wood, as well as the strength and locality of those most used.

An especially commendable feature of the work in the sloyd and the other branches of manual-training at North Easton is the principle of co-education, these branches have so long been considered of value in special lines, rather than as a necessary means to a general education and hence to a broader one. We can but anticipate noble results when the chief consideration of manual-training shall be the needs of the pupil, and such a development of his latent powers as shall well equip him for his work in life.

DRAWING.

Since Drawing entered our school curriculum it has come to mean much more than that simple name implies. It now stands for the broader culture that we term Art Education.

The main object of our whole school instruction is to cultivate the faculties of the child for the sake of his own higher spiritual development, and to prepare him for usefulness in the world he is preparing to enter. In Art Education we think we have a valuable aid to our purpose. In this age the trend of education is toward the utilitarian and we must watch that we keep the educational balance true.

The child is surrounded by two worlds, — the world of nature and the world of art, the handiwork of man. It is our happy privilege to lead him to see the beauties of form and color everywhere displayed in this natural world. It is not only our privilege, but our duty to reveal to him the beauties of the world of art, the legacy of past generations to which every child is heir.

The practical means by which we could acquire such results was at first a problem, but so much thought has been spent upon the matter that now our difficulties are fast disappearing. Our instruction is divided into three broad divisions,—Drawing, Form Study and Color. Through Free Hand Drawing we try to teach beauty of proportion, beauty of curvature, and beauty of outline. The Instrumental Drawing gives to the pupil the simple conventions of mechanical drawing that he will find useful in so many departments of life's work, and teaches neatness, accuracy, and precision.

Through Form Study the pupil learns the different type forms and learns to know and appreciate form found in nature and the work of man. Color is one of the few studies in our school course that appeals wholly to the æsthetic side of the child's nature. The love of color is inborn in human nature and rightfully claims recognition. The child naturally loves color, but when he is trained to appreciate it, a whole world of beauty is revealed to him which otherwise would have been to him a sealed book.

In North Easton we are following what are recognized as good and well-tried methods. When the child first enters school we try to develop form by means of the type solids which he can both see and touch; then we lead him to recognize the type forms in nature and manufactured objects and to express his own ideas of form by means of clay. We at once begin to teach color and carry this instruction systematically through his school life till he reaches the High School. As soon as the thought of form has developed we allow him to express such thought by drawing, modelling in clay, and development from paper. Beginning with the fourth year the instruction is divided into three departments, — Geometric Drawing, Decorative Drawing, and Pictorial Drawing.

Under the head of Geometric Drawing we include the use of the ruler, drawing to a scale, the classification of Rectilinear, Curvilinear, and Mixtilinear Figures, the solution of Geometric Problems, and the Construction of Geometric Figures.

Decorative Drawing includes Botanical Drawing, Historic Ornament, simple work in Design, and instruction in Color.

Pictorial Drawing includes Model and Object Drawing, Laws of Perspective and Composition.

Our High School work is not what we could wish owing principally to lack of room, but this difficulty will soon be removed, for as soon as we are in the new building we shall have most desirable rooms at our disposal. There we hope to enlarge the scope of our work by the addition of still-life work in light and shade and charcoal work from casts.

Our work as a whole we feel is progressing well, and the work of the pupils shows improvement. We would cordially invite inspection of our work, not only at the time of exhibition but at all times during the year.

PENMANSHIP.

In the first grade, where the children have attended school but one term, very good results in pencil holding and letter forming are shown.

The Primary grades are all doing excellent work. It would be well to use pens and unspaced paper in the third grade.

As to the final results in penmanship the work done in these grades is of great importance, since so much depends upon the way a child begins any work, and without good discipline as to application, proper position, and correct penholding, he is handicapped throughout his whole school life. The Grammar grades are having good success with the movement work which must result in developing free, graceful, rapid writing. Proficiency in writing lies in the method of executing rather than in written results. The question is often asked, "Why do pupils who form letters and write uniformly while in the lower grades become such poor writers in the higher grades?" Simply because in the higher grades they are required to put their writing to practical use, to write rapidly, and the cramped finger movement will not admit of it without slighting the form and uniformity of the letters; hence the appearance is as awkward as its execution. Therefore, after the primary work, the child, having gained strength in his fingers and wrists, should be placed at once upon the movement work upon entering the fourth grade and this continued through the upper grades. The regular teachers have rendered great assistance, not only during the special lesson, but by insisting upon the right position and movement during all writing exercises, and drilling the pupils in the counting exercises which is to secure symmetry and perfection of form. The discipline in all grades is to be especially commended; the pupils are attentive and willing and very rarely has a lesson been interrupted in the least by disorder or inattention.
